

July 26, 2018

To Whom It May Concern,

I certainly enjoyed my visit to your school and was truly impressed with your facility. It is without a doubt the most beautiful school that I have visited. In addition, to having been in operation for only three years, you have made a lot of progress in establishing what could be an outstanding institution. It takes time to fulfill a vision for a school.

With my first visit with you all, I was surprised at the progress you have made and seeking accreditation is a must. Accreditation takes time. At the minimum it takes three years to complete the process and with some schools which struggled to meet our standards, it takes longer. In your case, your school was well prepared for my visit and since you only lack working on a few deficient standards, you have successfully completed the first level of accreditation and lack only two more visits. This process cannot be shortened. In fact, your school appears to be doing well and I look forward to completing this process with you.

Respectfully submitted,

Johnny N. Smith

Consultant with the G.A.C.